Round 1

It consisted of 49 questions which has to be completed in 35 minutes. The time was sufficient if you have practiced basic bodmas and some basic aptitude questions for which pariksha.co is really good. It keeps on conducting weekly speed tests that will help you increase your speed.

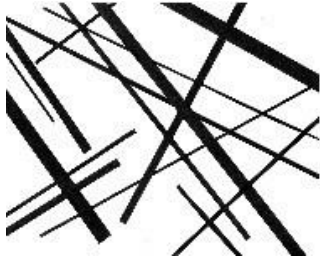

One important thing that I would like to focus more upon is those memory based questions which you won't get on internet easily. An image used to appear on screen for 5-10 seconds and you have to memorize it and after 4-5 other questions, questions related to that image were asked. So this test also tested your memorizing skills. The images were like :

F C H D
J R P O
D N B A

And some more this type of questions were asked. One question was to check how much fast you can use your memory as well as eyes:

Count the number of lines. (Here people generally make mistake to count the same line twice, thrice)

So round 1 was a bit easier and consisted of bodmas and memorizing test.

Round 2

Out of around 350 students who appeared for the online test 39 were shortlisted for this round. This was a basic HR round along with testing some of your vedic maths skills. Questions like Why Futures First? , Your family background , Why not a core company? etc. Then my interviewer asked me to ask him some questions and then it was my turn to test them ;) I asked 4 questions back to back:

- 1) How your company decides to whom you will assign Asian, European, American markets?
- 2) How many vacations are there except national holidays and Saturdays & Sundays ?
- 3) How your company manages trading in festivals like Diwali, Holi?
- 4) How even without having any stock we can sell a particular commodity and start with -1 position?(this was a trading question I asked him)

So this round also ended and I was one of those who made it to the next one!!

Round 3

Out of 39 students 12 were shortlisted for this round. This was a surprise round. It keeps on changing every year but one thing you can be sure of is that this round will test your trading skills. Trading is basically buying at low and selling at high or selling at high and again buying at low. This round consisted of 6 internal rounds each corresponding to the last 6 digits of an Indian currency note which were revealed by the panel after every round one by one. In this round all 12 of us were given a small copy and a number which we have to use to represent ourselves while trading in the game. Before starting the game they will make you understand all the rules and they will also play some practice rounds to make you understand it well. After that the panel members will start the original game. You just trade well keeping in mind the above definition of trading and remember one thing don't try to be oversmart they will always have a close look on you so please don't plan with any of your colleagues to make profits for each other. Trade FAIRLY please!!! .They don't check whether you are earning profits or are incurring losses at present they will focus on the amount of risk you put in to trade your lots(a trading term) with an objective to earn profits ,doesn't matter whether at present you are having profits or losses but objective must be to earn profits. This round again was very exciting and gave us a feel of trading.

And the best part was that I again made it to the next round. Yeahhhhh!!!!

Round 4

Out of 12 students only 8 were shortlisted for this round. This was again a surprise round. It was an aptitude test but with a different touch to it!!! You might be getting till now how they keep on imposing new situations on you. 8 of us were divided in groups of 4 and both the 2 groups were sent to two different rooms. There was a laptop kept at the centre of the table and 3 of the recruiters were present in the room. A score board was also kept where names of all 4 of us were written. There were total 16 questions in all with marking scheme as Q1 –Q4 of +1/-1 marks, Q5-Q8 of +2/-2 marks, Q9-Q12 of +3/-3 marks, Q13-Q16 of +4/-4 marks. We all have to see on that single laptop screen and the one who speaks the answer first gets the marks for that questions. This round was to test your relative speed with respect to each other. It included again some basic bodmas questions, puzzles ,image questions, patterns and the difficulty rose up with the marks. There is no fixed time constraint in this round, but the moment any one of you answer correctly the question gets ended. To our surprise when we reached at 14th question the recruiting team introduced a bidding scheme according to which you have to bid who will win and lose this round with 0-10 points. If you got correct then you will get bidding points otherwise it will be deducted from your present score. After we all bid he asked each one of us the logical reason why we bid that way? And then he moved to 15th and 16th questions. After all these questions the final scores were calculated and then he told that bidding was just for fun ☺(My bid proved totally correct, but it was of no use) .But latter on he also checked if bidding scores were to be included then who will win and in that case I was winning but though it was just for stress, the final scores were what you have done in the aptitude test.

The round ended and again I made it to the next round. Most of us were exhausted till now.

Round 5

Out of 8 only 5 were shortlisted. Then each one of were interviewed again by the panel members. There were 2 panel members in my case. They asked me puzzles related to probability and relative speed and then asked me bid on my answer if it is correct I will get a profit of 1,00,000 points otherwise a loss!! I was sure that my answer will be correct and I took the risk but again to my surprise my answer was WRONG and yes I lost 1,00,000 points but still they were focusing on your risk taking guts. Then again they asked me some basic HR questions after 2 puzzles and then said ok Rishabh wait outside we will be soon announcing the results.

We were asked to report to the TPO at 9:00 a.m. and till round 5 ended it was 6:15 p.m. So be ready for this hectic schedule if you are appearing for Futures First. They will just give you 5-10 minutes in between the subsequent rounds.

After 15-20 minutes of wait all 5 of us were called inside the room and as I entered the room I saw my offer letter kept on the Table.....

This was the feeling that can't be explained in words. They said we all are selected and gifted us Adidas shirts with Futures First written on it. ☺....

ADDITIONAL TIPS:

1.To get the feeling of trade you can register on an online trading simulator "trademogul". It is a platform made by Futures First. I have practiced it for two weeks trial period prior to the company's visit to the campus. Do try it, it's free of cost for two weeks. You will get much about trading concepts when you will trade on trademogul.com

2.Practice as many puzzles as you can. Statement puzzles, image puzzles, matchstick puzzles etc. There are thousands of questions on internet , make positive use of the LAN.

Basically what futures first tested was your Patience, stress bearing capability , emotional balance, logical reasoning, good aptitude skills, quick maths, good judgement skills, quick decision making skills, mental toughness. They love the candidates who perform better in direct proportion to the stress imposed.

Start early there is no tomorrow!!!!

Thank You
